Vivien Greenock

Trained at Colefax and Fowler in Mayfair and now operating from the Pimlico Road above Soane, Vivien is one of London's chicest and most discreet designers with clients that include Oscar de la Renta, John Fairchild, one of the grandest London clubs and several stately homes. Her bathrooms are famous for being magical and sumptuous Edwardian affairs — with polished nickel fittings, red leather club armchairs, flocked wallpaper and mahogany loo seats.

Rabih Hage

Rabih Hage is a previous winner of the Andrew Martin Interior Designer of the Year award and is known for his ultra-modern, distinctively sleek designs. He has been called the 'architects' designer' and brings a classical lyricism to his projects, which include townhouses in New York and London, as well as designing his own collection for DuPont Corian for the Milan Furniture Fair. Before setting up on Sloane Avenue, he trained in Paris, studying architecture and contemporary design.

Nicky Haslam

Nicky is still going strong, while also designing collections for OKA, writing books and lunching with Spear's. His book about his country house (above), Nicky Haslam's Folly de Grandeur, is not just a beautiful object for a coffee table: it is a homage to the idea of reinvention — something Nicky has specialised in. His book reveals the emotional bond that the English have with the aesthetic of their homes. With astellar design team headed by Colette can den Thillart and Jena Quinn, Nicky is an A-list decorator for A-list clients.

Hubert Zandberg Interiors

Collector and decorator Hubert Zandberg, originally from South Africa, moved to London eighteen years ago. He worked with David Champion where he became creative director. His reputation and experience culminated in the launch of Hubert Zandberg Interiors in 2002, which now has a dedicated team of twelve architects and interior designers. Located in the creative hub at Portobello Docks, Hubert Zandberg Interiors offers an architectural and interior design service for residential and commercial projects both in the UK and internationally. Hubert subscribes to the importance of properly proportioned structures and details, partnered always with a carefully curated collection of vintage, antique and custom-designed furniture. Hubert has been recognised for his endless dedication to creating highly customised interiors and architectural details for each project. He draws inspiration from his travels and the architectural details of the particular region of each commission. The majority of Hubert Zandberg Interiors' projects are repeat clients whom Hubert has worked with for over ten years. Hubert Zandberg's work is featured consistently in the world's leading publications, including Architectural Digest, House and Garden and Elle Décor.
