TAILOR MADE

Between the channeled seafoam cabinetry and the speckled backsplash, almost every surface in this London kitchen looks like supple fabric. We asked designer Hubert Zandberg the secret to creating a space that rivals the most carefully crafted ensemble. His starting point? Natural textures. “It’s about bringing the fashion element into play,” he says.

Bouclé Backsplash

The terrazzo was a practical decision. Durable and heavily freckled, it softens up the linear cabinets (the same effect as a nubby sweater). "I love a good line, but that can be overpowering in a small space," says Zandberg.

Corduroy Cupboards

By installing fluting and spray-painting on a coat of pale aquamarine, Zandberg transformed basic MDF into supersize ribbed cabinet fronts for a sumptuous look on a budget.

Suede Tabletop

The dining table owes its leather-like appearance to zinc, a material chosen to emulate the elegance of old Paris cafés. Warm and inviting, it adds a coziness to the fashion-forward room.
